

Remnant movements inside Kitharaka (Bantu) verbs and the architecture of grammar

Michal Starke
University of Tromsø & NYU

This talk will show that the legendary "huge Bantu verbs" are built in syntax and have a lot of internal complexity (and movement), but exactly of the type that we independently know from syntax. This is based on examining the scope and meaning of each morpheme inside that word and reconciling the scope facts with the linear order facts.